

Fang Wan was born in Dum Ning Village, and is now 71 years old. He enjoys good health, his weight being 20½ pounds.

He became a naturalized citizen in the year 1944, and he is now operating a Chinese night club in San Francisco under the name of "Club Shanghai." He is a very jolly person and he loves to see people have a good time and he is always glad to meet his friends.

He is a merri-moon, and he is now living in Oakland, California, together with his wife and eleven children, nine boys, two girls, and five grandchildren. Ten of his sons are doctors of medicine, and have been practicing their medical profession in the City of Oakland and vicinity for over ten years. His daughter, Mrs. M. J. Thompson, is practicing her profession in the City of Oakland. One son has served with the Army in the United States in the second World War. With a Lieutenant, and was promoted to Commander of the Medical Unit at Hamers Field. His other son is now in the Army, and his fifth son is recruited for the Army, and the sixth son will soon be called for a physical examination, and induction into the United States Forces.

When Fong was a little boy, he attended the Chinese School at his native village, and he lived with his father at a lantern store called Jan Pak, which store was then operated by his father and his father's father. Fong was born in the year of 1924; his store was located in the district of Lo Ho Shan District Court House. Fong was forced to go to court and sit and listen to trials. His father's store, even though small, being 150 feet deep, including the mexanize floor, and the back kitchen was often used by the people of the district who came from a far distance to adjudicate their cases before said district court.

His father often copied bulletins and decisions of these courts and sent them to the people out of town.

And, as a result of these experiences, Fong Wan was able to foretell in almost 66 per cent of the cases the outcome of the litigation in such courts. His father's store was the mecca of all people from outlying districts and particularly whenever there was a celebration, these people purchased lanterns from a few to a thousand, annually for these celebrations.

Fong Wen is one among the 666 Chinese who came from Ho Shau District, Kwong Tung Province, and the majority of these people in the United States know Fong Wan's family. Fong Wan himself, and the store back in China, need of course, Fong Wen's father.

In 1940, Fong Wan came to America as a student. In 1947, he attended high school in the City of Berkeley, and at his third year of high school, he met with an accident, which necessitated his remaining in bed for several months, thereby interrupting his studies in said high school.

Sharply thereafter, Fong Wan decided to learn the herb masters, and, after devoting many years to diligent study, has successfully become a herb practitioner, and is now the world's most famous herbist. The Chinese people call him doctor, merchant or lawyer.

In 1930, the board of directors of the Oakland Emporium selected Fong Wan President of the store, which was at that time doing

Because of his experience in the courts in China, and his desire to foster litigation in courts, whether the lawsuits were big or small, many times he predicted the cases in fact or notified each participant in the litigation. He can tell you right off when a contract is drawn legally; and in a particular case, he knew three years ahead of time that the certain contract would result in litigation, and he also predicted as to the likelihood of the success of the case.

In 1950-1951 a certain woman, dancer by profession, and her boyfriend, a dance teacher, and a union man conspired against Fong Wun at the Labor Commission. The labor commission demanded $599.00 of Fong Wun for the damages. In spite of the fact that this woman was a prostitute, Fong Wun was thousands of dollars. Thereafter, a suit was filed against Fong Wun and was tried in San Francisco, and in spite of arguments of the labor commission's lawyer, the Court decided the case in the favor of Fong Wun as credited by Fong Wun.

In 1951, the dance teacher became angry at Fong Wan, because he would not accept her Christmas present. She asked Fong Wan why he had not accepted her Christmas present and Fong Wan replied that her present was not wanted.

Less than three weeks thereafter, the dancer died violently against Peng Wan in San Francisco Superior Court. Both of these cases were thrown out of Court in January; thereafter, and on the very same day that these San Francisco suits were dismissed, the dancer filed the same suits in the Superior Court of Alameda County. One of these suits was against the San Francisco County Jail, and the other was against the State of California. Both suits were pending on September 16, 1923. Peng Wan now has an appeal pending on this case. The other case is still pending in Alameda County where Peng Wan has demanded a jury trial. Notwithstanding the fact that it was brought out at the trial of this case that this dancer was a Chinese Government peasant for three years, and came to the United States

The Court's decision, however, deals only with the question of the contract that this dancer has with Fong Wan. She claimed that her contract has expired; Fong Wan claims and asserts that she has a valid contract to perform for Wong Wan's Night Clubs only and not for any one else so long as she stays in the United States. The suits in question are identically the same, though the relief demanded is different, and her complaint is in general.

She has sued Fong Wen for $160,000 damages. But this case is only the tip of the iceberg of the dancer's boy-friend, dancer's teacher and dancer's mother's involvement in the case. Fong Wen's mother said suit that one Charly Lee, a Night Club in New York, offered her a contract for $400.00 a week. Of course, this is a lawsuit of her insinuation. In this trial, Fong Wen has brought a few of the dancer's mother's friends to the courtroom to testify that she is the dancer's alibi. This incident allegedly has occurred at "Club Shanghai" in San Francisco during business hours in the presence of you, all, and the dancer's mother, her friends, her mother's room, a few ten waiters, a night club manager, her mother and her mother's friends. Of course, the Court did not believe her.

October 26th after she lost her diamond ring. She went to New York City on November 18th to borrow money from Fong Winn and she signed an agreement, and a receipt, wherein she has agreed to go to rehearsal November 23rd at the "Club Oakland," but of course, she has never returned. The truth of the matter is that this dancer and Fong Winn never quarreled. She had a contract with Fong Wan, and Fong Wan has lived up to the terms and conditions of his contract. She has received union Thereafter, Fong Won has used this dancer for $100,000.00 for brothel of her contact, as well as her best friend, Charly Lee, and her partner for $100,000.00 damages for conspiracy to bribe the dancer's cousin and to cause Fong Won cause Fong Won monetary damages. These are still pending.

In his Club Shinjagui business, Fong Won personally selects the food daily that is to be used in connection with his business. It is well known that his meals are of excellent quality, since he has many New York City restaurant owners and chefs who recommend to all of his patrons, that each of them should at least eat one good steak a week in order to maintain himself in good health and strength.

Fong Wan has imported Chinese Acts from Hong Kong to perform at his "Club Shanghai" business, and each of said acts cost him approximately $3,000.00 and after paying the actors' weekly salaries it would take at least three years to recoup himself of all least part of the money paid out for the importation of these actors, as a profit from his said business. Each of these performers was recommended as a good performer, and he was also granted permission to come to America from the Chinese Consul General, who can testify as to the truth of the statements; and each of them has unqualifiedly agreed to work for Fong Wan for three years.

Night Clubs in San Francisco, like the Chinese Theatres is unable to finance, nor has the comblibility, or lack of good reputation in import Chinese Acts from China. There has been quite a practice in the Night Clubs and Chinese Theatres to take each other's act by giving a little higher wages for short engagement. Chinese Theatres in New York, Seattle, 3000, or 4000 miles away from each other have nothing to do with each other, and lots of money and trouble. To E. 1620

Fong Wan is always a gentleman and always in good spirits. He is completely indoctrinated to the customs, ideas and ideals of the United States, that he is a loyal citizen, and he always strives for the betterment of his fellow man.

It is to be noted however, that at the trial of the above-mentioned suits, it was definitely established by testimony of this dancer and her boyfriend, that they had agreed that this dancer would break her contract with Fong Wan, and that her boyfriend would become her manager at so much per cent of her salary, and the fact that this dancer has quit the services of Fong Wan is fully corroborated by the oral agreement which existed between this dancer and her boyfriend, which is in evidence with the papers of the case.

Because so many misstatements of facts have been printed in the papers

Before Fong Wan opened the "Chih Shanghai" he knew that after the 2nd World War, approximately 170,000 people came from the United States and Taiwan to work in factories and shipyards. They made and spent millions of dollars around the Bay Area and all the business increased immensely. When the war was over, these people brought new technologies, ideas, and the business was hundreds of times more profitable than before.

In 1946, Fong Wan closed the "Turkish" food center and sold it, netting a profit of 40 per cent higher. The business volume dropped, and the food center left over as the same as before the 2nd World War. The water level was the same reason either played a trick or went wrong in business, he braked down everything and was stopped. Fong Wan had a liquor license and lots of merchandise and liquors on hand. For six months he could not sell those so he took a chance and used his intelligence to drover over the tide of decreasing business. He started to operate the "Club Oakland" and "Club Shanghai" and he predicted that the "Club Shanghai" would cause him to lose $100,000.00 in operating expenses in the first two years, but he built up the biggest Chinese Night Club business and gained nearly 90 percent of all the Chinese

The highest peak of good business at "Club Shanghai" was in the middle of 1949, after the Hong Kong anarchists retired. Afterwards one set was stolen by another night club and one of the performers stole Pang Wan's money and slipped away to Canada. A dancer was teased away by a little, short Chinese fellow, first, and then her teacher. After the first night club supervisor made her a separate contract and trained strictly, the Foxes were able to get away through many coal trials. Pang Wan, like a tall pine tree, and got a contract with the Foxes. Pang Wan, who was a very good and diligent and laughed at these abuses. The dinner, which, no doubt, roll before being away. The Government cancelled her bond and declared her deportation. It is very peculiar, the other acts hollered for days and asked how soon they are allowed to work for an unwilling employer. After working for Fong Wun for three or four years, now some of them are idle and without work and have not much work elsewhere. They should realize that they are away from homeland cruelty.

Rumors circulated around that Fong Wan bought the property on Tin Garden Street, Singapore.

the advertising link to cinema. The purpose of hanging the real estate agent look Fong Wan to look at the building and tea room sites later Fong Wan decided to buy it because the property is in a good location and the building is spacious. Blank and whimsical can be put in to make an office building. After looking at the deal, she decided to buy because Fong Wan found out that there was a night club across the street. What people considered usual is not true.

People can stole an net worth $2,000.00, besides they look ridiculous. The purpose of hanging the advertising in 1940 approximately $40,000.00. Therefore these people are not for the most part.

People can buy to know about Fong Wan's success in the local real estate on search a copy of "Herb Lutz" from the Internet.
